“ Grandma Scheel was more than compassionate. She was generous with her time and energy, genuine when spoken to, and loved her family immensely. It was no secret she loved her violin and often bragged of her younger days playing in an orchestra. She loved to learn indeed, and earned her bragging rights. Grandma Scheel was highly educated. I remember her many stories growing up, she was a biochemist who lived through the Great Depression, she also translated German articles for WWII. Many topics she chose to talk about were often done with purpose or intent to receive a reaction in her favor. I also knew early on as a child she was someone special, she probably saw many things many of us never have or never will and then lived to talk about it. She was extremely knowledgeable too and keeping up with current events was another passion of hers. Many times she would purposefully leave her Wallstreet Journal out for her visitors to see. I loved to visit her and listen to her stories. And she loved to talk about them. She will be greatly missed and remembered always. ~ Jazalyn

“ Dottie was such a sweetheart! She was Joe & Steve's mom, but she was mom to many of their friends, as well. I remember spending the night at their home in Sierra Madre, and for breakfast she picked grapefruit from the tree in her yard, and sectioned it before putting it on our plates. I felt so taken care of! We shared a birthday, so I thought of her often. She and her husband showed me over-the-top kindness when I was a young adult in the big city of Los Angeles. She will be greatly missed.
