“ I worked with Jeanette at Baldwin Piano, and Ayshire. One day she told us she was being sent for some kind of quality training school, I think in New York. She was concerned because she said (if i am remembering correcty) she only had a high school education, and the rest of the team from our factory were engineers. I told her I thought she could do it. When the training ended, I was told Jeannette was the only one from our team to ace the final exam. I had the utmost respect for her.
